

My Sincerest Recommendation of Jack Larsen

As the Director of Web & Search at Love Communications, a full-service agency based in Salt Lake City, Utah, I cannot speak highly enough of Jack Larsen. He was a member of our web development team for just more than a year between 2023 and 2025. Recently, and unfortunately, we have not had the web development business necessary to staff a full web development team, resulting in layoffs that extended beyond Jack. In the time we worked together, I saw his exceptional talent and attention to detail in his work, his positive impact on our company's culture, and his devotion to continued learning. Jack's work performance played no role in being laid off from Love Communications - if we could staff a web development team now, Jack Larsen would be the first I hire.

Jack's breadth of experience in custom web development made him an outstanding contributor to our team. His knowledge of PHP, Javascript, HTML, CSS, project management, quality assurance, and ongoing site maintenance positioned him immediately as a leader in our team. In his time with Love Communications, Jack oversaw web development projects in their entirety, directing others on our team as necessary. His work is efficient and effective. He is a detail-oriented and well-documented web developer.

Beyond his professional accolades, Jack was a strong cultural fit for our agency. He's an excellent communicator to peers and clients alike. He is also flexible and unmovably positive - when others in our agency presented Jack with challenges, he navigated them well and provided results without causing friction. More importantly, the workflows he manages are nearly free from issues or challenges. Jack is well-organized, well-informed, and capable of managing multiple projects efficiently and effectively.

I would recommend Jack to any organization looking for an exceptionally talented, positive, and impactful candidate for their web development team. Finding a competent developer is the easy part, and Jack certainly is talented in the technical aspects of his work. However, it's more difficult to find a new member for your team that will help foster success within your organization and your client relationships. I have the utmost confidence Jack will do this as well, wherever his next role is. So, if you're looking for a web developer who holds both the hard and soft skills to make a real impact on your team, look no further than Jack.

I would love to be available as a reference to provide more details on my experience working with Jack. Please feel free to contact me.

Sincerely,

Dallas Miller | Web & Search Director, Love Communications
